INTRODUCTION.

THE very interesting and valuable accounts here printed relate to the Lancashire and Cheshire estates of HENRY DE LACY, Earl of Lincoln,* one of the most conspicuous and powerful barons of the realm, whose influence on the history of the two counties Palatine was of high moment. He was Lord of the Honor of Clitheroe, Baron of Halton, and hereditary Constable of Chester; moreover, it was he who suggested to the monks of Stanlaw Abbey to remove into the valley of the Calder. He owned great estates in Yorkshire, Lincolnshire, and elsewhere; and it was in reference to him and his ancestors that Camden said that Lincolnshire "glorieth in the Earls which have borne title thereof."

His parentage and ancestry may be seen in the annexed pedigree. He was a Ward of Henry III., and was brought up at his Court. At the early age of six years he married Margaret, eldest daughter of William Longspee,

* He is often called in Norman-French deeds "le Compte de Nichole," the corrupt form for Lincoln. This title perplexed Mr. Ormerod (Hist. Chesh., new ed., vol. i. p. 655, note a), who supposed that it was a clerical error for Lincolne. The Parliament of 1307 was summoned to meet at "Nicole." There was a Nichole Hall in Pontefract Castle.

who was grandson of Henry II., and Rosamond Clifford. Hence de Lacy in the King's writs is frequently styled "our cousin." In 1268 he and his wife performed homage for, and obtained livery of, all the lands which descended to the latter on the death of William de Longspee, who was entitled to the earldom of Salisbury. De Lacy's early manhood was spent in warfare under Edward I., whom in many respects he resembled in character, and to whom he became a most devoted friend. He also lived on terms of amity with Edmund, Earl of Lancaster, the King's brother. On 8 March, 1272, de Lacy was knighted with Prince Edward and others, created Earl of Lincoln, and made governor of Knaresborough Castle. His chief Yorkshire barony was that of Pontefract, where he held his court; and that place is frequently named in the Compotus. Staincliff, another Yorkshire manor, is mentioned twice (pp. 14, 125). In the year last named, de Lacy, with the Earl of Lancaster, was engaged in the attack upon Robert de Ferrars at Chartley Castle, in Staffordshire, a rebel who would not surrender his stronghold; and a royal pardon for the slaughter of the garrison was subsequently obtained by the besiegers.

In 1276, de Lacy entered upon the first of many campaigns against the Welsh. In the following year he did homage for 7½ knights' fees. Numerous writs of summons for his attendance at Parliament were addressed to him from 1276 to 1309; he was also summoned to the King's councils; and during the same period he acquired the right of establishing many fairs upon his estates, including those in Lancashire. There are grants extant connected with Burnley, Congleton, Rochdale, Colne, Clitheroe, and other towns.* In 1279 he was one of the locum tenentes in England during the King's absence in France.

The Earl's great-grandfather had given Rochdale Church, an appendage of the Honor of Pontefract, to the Abbey of Stanlaw; and he himself, 1 January, 1283, made a grant of the Church of Whalley to the same Abbey. A later deed, dated Pontefract, the same year, granted the remainder of the advowson; and the donor expressed a wish that when the monks removed to

(31*st Rept. Dep. Keeper*, p. 17.)

Whalley they would take with them the remains of his ancestors. (Coucher Book, p. 190.) He reserved to himself the right of hunting over the Whalley domains; and his love of the chase is also shown in many requests to the King for free warren over the different lands which he held. It was not without interest that he watched the progress of the enclosing of his park near Tottington in the year 1305; and the hawks (esparvarii) and cocks sent up to London in the same year may have been for presents to friends (pp. 115, 185).

In reward for his activity in the operations against the Welsh in 1282-3, one of the "Edwardian" castles was bestowed upon him. The royal grant of the Lordship of Denbigh is dated 1284; and the writs henceforth describe him as Lord of Ros and Rowynock. The quota of men from his lordship in 1287, towards the suppression of the Welsh rebellion, was 400 foot-soldiers. Leland ascribed to him the building of Denbigh, adding that his effigy was over the gateway.* At Conway, 12 May,

* Grants in fee from the Earl are dated at Denbigh, 8 June, 1283, to two of his clients, for their homage and service of certain acres of land of the waste of Congleton; and another of five acres of waste land in the foreign wood of Halton. In 1284 he held a license to grant lands in mortmain in his manor of Denbigh to the seven chaplains officiating in the chapel of that manor. (35*th Rep. Dep. Keeper*, p. 11; 31*st*, p. 14.) On 1 Sept., 1290, by a royal charter, all his men inhabiting, or who in future should inhabit, his town of Denbigh, should be free of toll, stallage, pavage, pannage, murage, pontage, and passage, in the counties of Chester, Salop, Stafford, Gloucester, Worcester and Hereford. Denbigh in this grant is misprinted Dynelegh (near Burnley) in Sir Peter Leycester, p. 274, and in Ormerod's Cheshire, vol. i. p. 699.

1283, de Lacy attested Bishop Burnell's charter granting a fair to Nantwich. He was with the King during his three years' absence in the French Provinces.

The foundation of Kirkstall Abbey, in 1152, was due to the benefaction of a de Lacy. In the year 1287 this convent had become so involved in debt to a Jew and other creditors that Abbot Hugh sold the Blackburnshire and other estates of the Abbey to de Lacy, at ten years' purchase. It does not appear whether the buyer was actuated by religion or interest. The transaction is noticeable from the fact that the Abbot has left an account of an interview with the Earl about the negociation. In a letter to his convent, dated 12 November, 1287, the Abbot describes his wearisome journey to Gascony in search of de Lacy. He set out on 18 September, and travelled thither through Burgundy. Arrived at St. Sever, called "the remotest part of Gascony," he says: "Here we found our patron, the Earl of Lincoln, with other great men of the Court, attending upon the King; and to him we explained fully and to the best of our ability the distresses of the House. He was touched with pity at our representation, and promised us all the information and assistance in his power." The sale of the land being arranged,* the wily ecclesiastic concluded

* St. Sever, Saturday next after the feast of St. Luke the Evangelist (25 October), 1287. Release and quitclaim from the Abbot and convent of Kirkestall to Henry de Lascy, Earl of Lincoln, and Constable of Chester, of all the Lands which they had and held of the said Earl in Accrington, Cliviger, and Hunscot, in the county of Lancaster, and his letter by urging the monks to remove everything moveable from the land except the crops, and to labour day and night to that end, before the Earl's messenger, whom he was purposely detaining, arrived to take seizin! The Abbot added, "It will not be prudent to shew these letters to any one." (Hist. Craven, ed. 1878, pp. 81-2.)

"Infinite grants," says Sir Peter Leycester, "were made to and by this Henry Lacy;" and his statement is borne out by those printed in the Histories of Cheshire and Whalley, and in the Reports of the Keeper of the Public Records. The following are without date:

Henry de Lascy, Earl of Lincoln, to Sir Edmund Talebot and Jane his wife: the manor of Rishton in tail male special, to hold as fully as Adam de Rishton, a bastard, held the same. (35*th Report*, p. 11.)

Henry de Lascy, Earl of Lincoln, and Constable of Chester to the Monks of St. Mary of Rufford: all the lands which they held of him in Elmeton (Yorkshire). (Ibid., p. 12.)

Henry de Lacy, Earl of Lincoln, and Constable of Chester, to the burghers of Congleton: a guild-merchant, housbote and haybote, and common of pasture, and privilege of grinding at the mill of Congleton. (Cal. Inquis. p. m. Duch. Lanc., No. 47, pt. ii. vol. i.)

An Inquisition at Chester, 11 May, 1288, returned de Lacy as holding eight knights' fees. In 1290 he joined in the letter addressed to the Pope complaining of the attempt made to appropriate certain prebends of the Cathedrals of York and Lincoln to the Hospital of the Holy Ghost and the Basilica of St. Peter's at Rome. (Parl. Writs; and cf. IV. Hist. MSS. Com., p. 396.)

in la Roundehay, Secroft, and Shadewelle, in the county of York. Attested by many bishops and knights, including Sir Otho de Grandison. (35*th Rept. Dep. Keeper*, pp. 11, 12.)

On 12 August, the same year, the king nominated him first commissioner for rectifying the abuses of Justice on the part of the Judges during the King's absence in France. In 1291-2 he accompanied the King in the expedition against Scotland, of which Edward claimed to be sovereign lord. In the latter year, de Lacy was called upon to establish his right for himself and vassals to be exempt from fines and amerciaments in the county of Lancaster. He proved that he had his free court at Clitheroe for the wapentake of Blackburnshire, where all his vassals had been wont to plead from time immemorial, as the sheriff pleads in other wapentakes. He also showed that he was free from fines and amerciaments of the county for all his lands and fees in Blackburnshire except two (Downham and Worston), and for his demesne lands in the hundreds of Leyland, Amounderness and West Derby, and to be free from suits of counties and wapentakes, except for his lands in Rochdale, for which he owed suit to the County Court of Lancaster and Wapentake of Salfordshire. (Lanc. and Chesh. Records, p. 358.)

The Earl was unfortunate in his offspring. His eldest son, Edmund, was drowned in a well at Denbigh Castle, and his son John was killed by falling through a window in Pontefract Castle. A tradition associates the latter catastrophe with the manor house of Ightenhill.

His daughter Alice, ultimately his heiress, born about 1283, was affianced at nine years of age (says Camden) to Thomas Plantagenet, son of Edmund (Crouchback)

Earl of Lancaster, on condition that if they died without heirs the Earl of Lincoln's property should go to Edmund Earl of Lancaster. The girl and her maid are introduced into the first of these two Compoti (pp. 16, 126). On 12 July, 1288, letters patent were granted to Alice de Lacy, of the Castle, town, manor, and Honor of Halton, in the county of Chester, for and during her life, with reversion after her decease to the King and his heirs. The marriage of his daughter seems to have turned the Earl's attention to the ultimate disposal of his property. He had evidently given up all hopes of an heir, and in 1292 surrendered his barony of Pontefract to the King. But soon afterwards the barony was re-granted with remainder to Edmund, Earl of Lancaster,* who about this time borrowed 4,000 marks from de Lacy.

* Westminster, 28 October, 1294. Charter granting to Henry de Lacy, Earl of Lincoln, and the heirs of his body, the estates surrendered by the said Earl to the King, viz., all the castles, lands, &c., which he held in the counties of Lancaster and Chester, the manor of Kingston in Dorset, and also the reversion of the manor of Slaidburn in Bouland, with the forest and chase, the manor and soke of Snaith, and all other lands and tenements held in dower by Alice de Lacy, mother of the said Earl, after the decease of the said Alice; and in failure of issue the premises are to remain to Edmund the King's brother, and his heirs for ever. (31*st Rept. Dep. Keeper*, p. 17.)

Westminster, same date. Charter granting the manor of Sutton [par. Prescot, co. Lanc.] to Henry de Lacy and Margaret his wife, Earl and Countess of Lincoln, for term of their lives; and after their decease to Thomas, son of Edmund the King's brother, and his wife Alice, daughter and heiress of the same Earl and Countess and the heirs of their bodies; with remainder in failure of issue to the right heirs of the said Thomas. (Ibid.)

From the year 1293 the Earl of Lincoln was employed in many embassies to France. On 11 November, 1294, the Welsh defeated the Earl at Denbigh, and soon afterwards they gained an advantage over Prince Edward. In the following year five Welsh hostages, including a chieftain, were conveyed through the Earl's territories to Pontefract. (Comp., pp. 51, 147.)

The year to which the first Compotus belongs was one in which the kingdom was engaged in warfare in France, Wales and Scotland. Towards the expenses of the war with the latter country, 6*l.* is entered in the accounts (pp. 64, 154) for three knights' fees in Widnes. The Earl appears to have gone into Brittany with the army of the Earl of Lancaster, upon whose decease he succeeded as Commander, becoming also Viceroy of Aquitaine. The military affairs of the French provinces occupied the Earl's attention for a few years.

At the defeat of the Scots under Wallace at Falkirk, 22 July, 1298, de Lacy led the vanguard of the English army, which contained 1,000 men from Lancashire. Later in the same year he was entrusted with an enquiry into the conduct of the Justices of the Forests and other forest officers. The long-continued war with Scotland taxed Lancashire very heavily: in 1297 the Lancashire levies were 3,000 men, and the Yorkshire number was 4,000. In 1299 the quotas were 2,000 and 4,000 respectively from the same counties. The Earl was summoned, 18 November, 1298, to a Parliament to meet at Carlisle, 6 June, 1299, where musters were to assemble for punishing the rebellion of the Scots. Letters patent, dated Durham, 10 November, 1298, recite that the King had "lately" granted to de Lacy the stewardship, towns, castles, and all the lands and tenements of James, formerly steward of Scotland, the King's enemy and rebel, with some exceptions. (31st Rept., p. 18.)

It was probably on his way to Scotland in 1300 that de Lacy, at Chester, did homage to the Prince of Wales for some of his lands. (Hist. Chesh., vol. i. p. 232.) He was with the royal army when it assembled at Carlisle, 24 June, 1300, for the invasion of Scotland; and his scutage for this army in respect to the knights' fees for Widnes, Tottington, Penwortham, Blackburnshire, and Bowland, is entered in the Compotus (pp. 63, 101, 107, 112), amounting to the large sum of 25*l.* 8*s.* 7*d. His knights' fees in the year 1300 were nine in England and six in Wales.

The Earl participated in the capture of Carlaverock on the Nith, between 5th and 12th July, 1300. The siege of the Castle was the subject of a curious contemporary poem in Norman-French, which in lively verse sings the arms and the men engaged in the exploit. The characters of above one hundred noblemen and knights are sketched in the poem. The army, we learn, was divided into four squadrons, commanded by the Earl of Lincoln, the Earl of Warren, the King himself, and Prince Edward of Carnarvon. The Earl of Lincoln is accordingly first noticed; he is termed the "good" Earl, and his military valour is pointed out as his chief characteristic; his banner was of yellow silk, bearing a lion rampant purple:

* Escuage, = Scutage, or Service of Shield, is thus noticed by Littleton: "When the King maketh a voyage royail into Scotland for to subdue the Scots, hee that holdeth by a fee of Knights service behooveth to be with the King by 40 dayes, well and convenably arrayed for the war." (Littleton's Tenures, ed. 1641.)

Enris li bons Quens de Nicole,
Ki provesté embrasce e acole,
E son cuer le a soveraine,
Menans le eschele premeraine,
Banner ont de un cendal safrin
O un lioun rampant purprin.

The poet then describes the retinue of "the good and well-beloved Earl," in which were John de Lancaster, John de Huddleston, &c.

The latter portion of the Earl's days was occupied in embassies to the Continent and in the Scotch wars. He was summoned to a Parliament to meet at Westminster, 28 February, 1305. In the year of the second Compotus he was in Lancashire, for his receiver at Clitheroe between May and September, 1305, paid 1s. 8*d.* for carrying the Earl's bed to Denbigh (pp. 115, 185). A succeeding entry seems to indicate that the Earl was staying at his Tottington manor. The same year he was despatched to Lyons, to be present at the inauguration of Clement V., and he presented him, in the King's name, with some vessels of pure gold. On 22 July, 1306, the King allowed him to give some advowsons to the scholars of Oxford in a certain house there. On 9 January, 1307, a royal commission empowered Walter, Bishop of Chester

(i.e., Coventry and Lichfield), treasurer of the exchequer, and de Lacy, to open the Parliament at Carlisle; and on the roll of that assembly in February, his name comes next after the Prince of Wales's. A commission of array for raising 1,000 foot-soldiers in Lancashire, attested at Carlisle, 19 March, gives 150 men as the quota from the liberty of Blackburnshire, and the rest formed the quota of the body of the county, the troops being needed to pursue Robert Bruce on the moors and marshes, where he was lurking. During this campaign de Lacy accompanied the ruthless King. The army left Carlisle 4 July, 1307; the King died at Burgh on the 7th. De Lacy was with the monarch in his last moments, and received his request to be faithful to his son. A letter written at the end of the month mentions the homage which had been done at Carlisle to the new King "by the Patriarch of Jerusalem, the Earl of Lincoln, and other great men." (35*th Rept.*, p. 25.) The Earl, at Edward II.'s coronation, bore one of the swords of state. About the same time he was made governor of Skipton Castle; and throughout the early part of the reign, he was prominent in the Scotch war and other events, acting on one occasion (1 Sept., 1310) as "Custos" of the kingdom.

His knights' fees in Lancashire were ultimately $14\frac{1}{3}$ in number. In 1303, in pursuit of the accumulation of property near his London house in Chancery Lane, he acquired from a barber named Richard de Munden, "a house with shops in Ironmonger Lane within the precincts of the Earl's mansion, lately belonging to Sir Otho de Grandison, the same house having been of the gift of Aymer de Valence for term of life." The mansion, which was then in the suburbs, occupied a considerable portion of the present Inn of Court, called Lincoln's Inn, which, named after the Earl, bears his arms. In the records of the Duchy of Lancaster there is a Compotus, dated 1296, showing the receipts and expenditure in his garden at at Holborn, which he seems to have worked for profit as much as his Lancashire vaccaries.

Portions of the new buildings at Whalley had been completed in 1306; and on 12 June, 1308, the first stone of the conventual Church was laid by the Earl in person (Whalley, vol. i. p. 90). On 6 October, 1310, the King, by writ tested at "Byger," took the Earl into his protection, as well as all his lands in Chestershire.

The Earl died in London early in February, 1311; and he was buried with great pomp at St. Paul's, to which edifice he was a munificent contributor. A stately tomb was set up in his memory, which, though destroyed in the fire, has been preserved in a plate by Hollar. On 16 Feb., the Inquisition of his lands was taken; and on the 28th the King made a forced loan of 4,000 marks from his executors, N. de Reding, R. de Silkstone, J. de Sandale, the King's treasurer, and Sir H. le Scroop, knt., who proved the will 16 May (Fasti Ebor, vol. i. p. 381). Through the Plantagenets the estates came to the Duchy of Lancaster.*

* Cf. Camden's Brit., ed. Holland, 1610, pp. 544-5; Brooke's Catalogue, pp. 124-5; Vincent, p. 320; Mills' Catalogue of Honour, p. 321; Dugdale's Baronage, vol. i. p. 103-6; Leycester's Cheshire Antiqq., pp.

There is not much in these rolls to afford an insight into the Earl's character. One or two instances seem to mark his generosity. His charities consist of a gift to the Black Friars of Chester, and of alms in the shape of cloth. His piety is more apparent. The lamp at Salley Abbey in memory of his grandfather was annually replenished. To the shrine of St. Edmund in that Abbey he gave costly articles, including a cup of silver-gilt which was said to have belonged to St. Edmund. The old cross in his market at Burnley was repaired and re-erected at his charges (p. 18), and still remains a relic of his days. (Whalley, vol. ii. p. 174.)

(Lanc. and Chesh. Records, p. 297.)—In 1292 the Earl, with other great men, was directed by letters patent to make certain provisions for the "due maintenance of arms." (31*st Report*, p. 16.) In 1306, in reply to a petition of the Parliament at Carlisle, Edward I. declared that after the grant which he had made to De Lacy for life of the Return of Writs in certain hundreds, he "would not grant a similar franchise, as long as he lived, to any one excepting his own children." (Rot. Parl., p. 211 b.) The same King, by letter dated Lanercost, 18 February, 1306-7, addressed to Walter, Bp. of Chester, Henry de Lacy "nostre chier cousin," and others of the Council at Carlisle, referred to the appointment of Walter de Bedewynde as treasurer of York cathedral. (Ibid., and Le Neve, vol. iii. p. 159.)

The two Compoti consist of the accounts for the years 1295-6 and 1304-5, of the Stewards, the Parkers, the Farm-bailiffs, the Cowherds, and other servants of the great Earl in the towns or granges of his Honor of Clitheroe and Barony of Halton.* The first large holding included the old parishes of Whalley and Blackburn, taking in Tottington and other places; and the second (called once "Haltonshire") comprised Widnes and Denton in Lancashire, with Congleton and other places in Cheshire extending from Mottram-in-Longdendale to Alderley and Little Peover.

CLITHEROE, the Lancashire stronghold and residence of the Earl, lying in the line of his journeys between Lancaster and Pontefract, here shews itself to be a place of importance as head of the Honor. It assumed an almost regal state when the Earl was present. There, annually, when his tenants appeared to offer him the three weeks' suit and service, the stewards from the neighbouring manors presented their exactly-balanced accounts to the auditors (audientium, p. 16). The revenue from that town was about £60 (equal to about £1,200 now), while Rochdale gave about £24, and Downham and Halton about £16 each. The Earl had manor-houses at Ightenhill, Colne, Accrington, and Tottington. Hard by were the forests, viz., Pendle, Accrington, Rossendale, and Trawden; and there were parks stocked with deer at Ightenhill and Musbirry. The Vaccaries, which formed a chief source of the Earl's revenue, were twenty-nine in number, producing annually about £3 each (pp. 111, 183). Whitaker's definition of Vaccaria as a breeding-farm is borne out by the accounts of what is called the Instaurum, or cattle-stock, of Blackburnshire (pp. 20-42, 129-142; 68-88, 156-168). Of the cattle, at that time small in size, the oxen were most valuable, for they were used with the wain and the plough. Edward I. more than once took the oxen of the Abbot of Bolton to carry the baggage of his armies towards Scotland. The average price of an ox in the years before us was about 9*s.*; a cow or heifer was about 7*s.*, and a hide was worth about 2*s.* 6*d.*

* The originals are two large rolls, in very fine condition, now in the Record Office, London, forming Div. xxix., Bundle 1, of the "Ministers' Accounts," heretofore in the office of the Duchy of Lancaster. In the Yorkshire Archæological Journal, vol. viii. pp. 351-8, is printed the first part of the Compotus of the Yorkshire Estates of the Earl for A.D. 1295-6.

At the head of each vaccary was an Instaurator, or bailiff in charge of the stock, who lived at the granges (grangia), while his assistant cowherds or herdsmen were sheltered in booths. Grange and Booth in many place-names still indicate the sites of these dwellings. The cattle, it is seen, were affected to some extent with the murrain; but they suffered more from the ravages of wolves.*

In a country thus infested sheep farming was at a disadvantage, and neither sheep nor wool are mentioned in the rolls.* The horses and charges for farriery in the Ightenhill accounts indicate the noted breeding establishment which was long kept up there. (Whalley, vol. i. p. 308.) A cart-horse was worth £2 or £3. Professor Rogers says that many of the horses bought for Merton College came from the North of England: he mentions one bought at Cockermouth in 1282 for £2 13*s.* 4*d.*, and four bought at a place called the Park in 1285 for £5 6*s.* 8*d.* each. The horses and ponies in these accounts do not appear to have been of good breeds. The word afer was, in the time of Spelman, the common name in Northumberland for a poor horse.

* These animals infested the forests, particularly the forest of Rossendale, and were continually destroying the cattle. Dean Cutwulph of Whalley got his name from cutting off a wolf's tail while hunting; and some existing names, as Wolfendale, Wolfreden, Wolfenden, Wolfstones, Wolfstanclive, &c., are connected with the depredations or traditions of these animals.

Many facts of local interest may be derived from an examination of the two sets of entries under each place. The references to hay, oats, wheat, and corn-mills, show that the cultivation of waste lands was increasing near the towns, the example having been set by the monks. Enclosing was still going on with the favour of the Earl and his Stewards, for there are many entries relating to hedging and ditching, and to low rents, for the first year, of new enclosures, terræ appruviatæ, as they are called. The assarts (called in Lancashire riddings, and in Yorkshire royds), as well as the lawnds, or enclosures in parks,

* Sheep farms require good fences, and very few of the mountain slopes were at that time enclosed. When by an order of the King and Council, 30 July, 1297, 8,000 sacks of wool were ordered to be seized in 25 counties, Yorkshire alone of the northern counties is named. In that county the revenue of the Abbots from wool was very large, and the convent of Bolton gave rewards to those who killed wolves.

supply other signs of the development of agriculture under the hard conditions of the existing forest laws. There was an important fulling mill at Burnley, and another at Colne, pointing to a local woollen manufacture before the time of Queen Philippa. The fulling mill of Manchester is first named in 1322; and John Whitaker's assertion (MS. Hist.) that this mill was probably the earliest in all the north of the island is erroneous. Bradford fulling mill occurs in De Lacy's Inquisition of 1311. A few iron forges and workings on the Earl's estates are mentioned. There were also some very active operations in lead-mining and smelting in the neighbourhood of Haslingden, which were watched by the Earl with peculiar interest. Seven charres of lead were carried from Baxenden to Bradford (pp. 115-16, 185-6). No old lead workings have been recorded in this neighbourhood. John Webster, in his Metallographia, 4to., 1671, speaks of a former silver mine at Brunghill Moor, in the parish of Slaidburn, and of a lead mine at Rimmington, in the parish of Gisburn, belonging to Mr. Pudsey, of Bolton Hall, juxta-Bolland, whence the metal in Queen Elizabeth's days was obtained to coin "Pudsey's shillings" (pp. 20-1). Coals, called sea-coals, are noted as being sold at Trawden and Clivager. (Cf. Whalley, vol. i. 361, ii. 54.) In 1294, ten shillings' worth of coal was purchased by the convent of Bolton. The earliest notice of sea-coal met with by Prof. Rogers is at Dover, in 1278.

The rolls present an instructive picture of the country life of the uplands of Lancashire in feudal times, and indicate with minuteness the sources from which a great Baron condescended to take revenue. The amounts derived from markets, fairs, agistments or leys, fisheries, and the "merchats" of women,* are set down no less than old brushwood, penny rents, and the goods of dead villeins. The particulars of rents, produce, wages, and materials, supply valuable data for this part of the kingdom in the era preceding the Black Death. Had the accounts been more continuous they would have rivalled in value the household roll of Bp. de Swinfield.

That very excellent History of Whalley, which was based on cognate records of old date, lends a further value to these Compoti. Whitaker would have rejoiced to have speculated on the curious facts found in them, and to have drawn from them in picturesque and rhythmic language the important conclusions they present. He examined, it is true, the local portion of the Earl's great Inquisition post mortem, which is a condensed account of the property and its tenures, appraised under its real value; but the account in these Compoti is in some respects more exact, and deals with periods of fifteen and six years previously. The Inquisition was termed by Whitaker "one of the most valuable documents from which the history of Whalley has been compiled," and in recognition of its value, the Chetham Society, in 1868, issued it in vol. lxxiv of the series, edited by Mr. John Harland. The copy printed was not, however, taken from the original Inquisition, which is extant (Cal. Inquis. p. m., 1806, vol. i. p. 244; Gregson, p. 91), but from an old MS. translation in a book in the hands of the steward of the Honor of Clitheroe at Clitheroe Castle. The Inquisition and the Compotus admirably illustrate each other, and tend to make more complete the record of the origines of certain places.

* The merchats (marcheta in Infim. Lat.) were the fines or cheats which a tenant paid his lord for the marriage of a daughter. One of these fines was, it seems, unjustly levied on Ellen de Rediker and Christiana de Wodehouses, who proved that they were not children of villeins (pp. 4, 119; 17, 127). Cf. Beaumont and Fletcher's play of The Custom of the Country.

The list of manors in the Barony of Halton (pp. 43, 142 seq.; 57, 150 seq.) is especially valuable. Some of these are not named as such in the Histories, and to those which are named important details may now be added.*

* Mottram-in-Longdendale is a case in point. The early history is given by Dr. Ormerod and Mr. Helsby (vol. iii. p. 851), and Mr. Earwaker (vol. ii. p. 112). Under the name of Langdendale the two Compoti clearly indicate its connection with the Barony, 1296–1305. The tenants in the valley were, we see, accustomed, according to an ancient tenure, to put in order the roads leading to Chester at the time of the Chester Fairs (pp. 46, 143; 60-1, 151). Longdendale does not occur in the Earl's Inquis. post mortem. But Sir Peter Leycester mentions it, though neither his editors nor Mr. Earwaker have availed themselves of the information. In the list of the places making up the Fee of the Lord of Halton, printed by Sir Peter (pp. 288 seq., Orm., vol. i. p. 707), which, he says, "seems to be taken out of the records of Halton about Edw. 2," the manor of Longdendale is first named. This record says, "Dominus Robertus de Longdendale [probably Robert Holland] tenet Longdendale pro uno Feodo militis, & per Relevium cum acciderit, £5." It is added that "at the time when this Feodary was renewed, about Hen. 6," the tenant was Sir William Lovell. From a schedule amongst his own evidences, being an account

In these Cheshire accounts will be found the names of the officials of Halton Castle, and mayors of Congleton.

The Senescalli of Blackburnshire were persons of consequence, and the office was an object of ambition. The stewards who are introduced into these rolls founded some landed families in the county. Robert de Heppale, steward and chief "Instaurator" of Blackburnshire, occurs in Christopher Towneley's transcripts. He prepared the accounts, in conjunction with the servientes or præpositi Robert de Ryley and Peter de Ruddeby, for Accrington and several other manors and granges. He attested some of the Earl's local charters, and gave seizin of lands. In the Birch Feodary in Gregson's Fragments (p. 345), where the arms of the family are engraved, it is said that Robert, son of Robert de Heppale, held parts of several manors in the Wapentake of Leyland. In the second roll, Edmund Talbot is the steward. He belonged to the family of Talbot of Bashall (Whalley, vol. ii. p. 400), and was engaged to his patron for the repayment of a large loan (pp. 112, 183). Between Heppale and Talbot Simon de Balderston was steward, called in the second roll "Receiver of Lancaster" (p. 64). At pages 53, 148, Nicholas de Leycester is introduced. He was an ancestor of whom Sir Peter, the Cheshire historian, was proud. The latter calls him of Hugh de Preston, Bailiff of Halton, 1359, Sir Peter cites the rent of 2*s.* 4*d.* (not 3*s.* 4*d.* as in the Compotus) "from a tenement [qy. the tenants] in Longdendale for the Ward of the Ways, which they used to keep at the time of Chester-Fair, Termino Johannis Baptistæ" (p. 284; Orm., vol. i. p. 704).

"Seneschal to Henry Lacy, Earl of Lincoln," adding that he finds him styled knight in 1292. He died in 1295, and his heir was Roger Leycester. (Antiqq. of Cheshire, p. 355; Arley Charters, p. xii; Compotus, pp. 65, 155.)

Gilbert de la Legh, of Hapton, the head stock-keeper of the Accrington vaccaries at a yearly salary of £2, was an ancestor of the Towneleys of Towneley. He is here occasionally called "Gilbert son of Michael;" and that the latter is the same person as the "Instaurator" is shewn by a charter granted by Henry de Lacy at Colne, 10 March, 1302, who confirmed to Gilbert, the son of Michael de la Leye, "nostre estorour de Blackburnshire," some lands in Clivager. (Whalley, vol. ii. pp. 190, 203.) At the date of the Earl's Inquisition he held 140 acres of land in Clivager. His assistant, John de Paldene, who was also associated with the steward, received the profits of the vaccaries, and attended to the sales of cattle at Bolton-le-Moors and Pontefract. Of the Under-bailiffs, without surnames, Simon the Geldherd was an important person in the vaccaries. He is once called Custos Cromii (p. 85; and cf. pp. 38, 39, and 40); but we do not identify the place, which was in Ightenhill manor. John the Parker of Ightenhill succeeded Peter de Ruddeby in that office, at an annual salary of 45*s.* 6*d.*, with robes worth 13*s.* 4*d.*: these Parkers made the returns from their park and grange. Thomas "serviens" of Standen, whose wages were 1½*d.* per day, and a dress worth 6*s.* 8*d.*, rendered the first account of that place, noticeable for corn and oats; and the second was rendered by William de Brunlay.

Of the auditors, high in the confidence of the Earl, Sir William de Nony was a cleric, being Rector of Slaidburn from 1295 to 1316, and chaplain of St. Michael's chapel in Clitheroe Castle (Whalley, vol. ii. p. 512; Coucher Book, p. 227). On 15 July, 1300, he brought from Scotland his master's will with seals attached, and delivered letters to Archbishop Corbridge at Thorp, begging that prelate to put his seal to it, which was done (Fasti Ebor, vol. i. p. 358). Thomas de Fishburn, who frequently attested the Earl's charters, was probably the Justice itinerant of that name, 1292–1317. Robert de Silkstone, who was one of the Earl's executors, was a cleric.

Oliver de Stansfeud, or Stansfield, Constable and Receiver of Pontefract Castle, was a great man with his master. His pedigree is in Watson's Halifax, p. 281, and in Whalley, vol. ii. p. 230. The Earl gave him the manor of Worsthorn, which he held by homage and service of one penny, and he lived at Hesandforth. His gravestone is in the Stansfield Chapel of Burnley Church, upon which is a sword referring to his office in the Castle. Simon Noel was Receiver of Clitheroe, as also was Robert son of Adam; both of whom drew up a good portion of the Compoti.

This volume, which has been several years in the press, was undertaken at the suggestion and at the expense of the late Mr. William Langton, who recognized the rare value of the subject. The connection of the Rev. P. A. Lyons with the last edition of the History of Whalley, 1876, seemed to point him out as a fitting editor, and Mr.

Langton committed the task to him. He is responsible for the transcript from the original rolls, and also for the translation up to page 184, which he saw through the press. His other engagements have prevented him from completing the work by an introduction, notes, and corrigenda. It is to be regretted that numerous errors have crept into both text and translation, which would no doubt have been corrected by Mr. Lyons had opportunity allowed. Some of the principal errors are pointed out on pp. 188 seqq., but many other errors in figures and certain words could not be rectified without an examination of the rolls themselves. Some of the translations, too, are open to question; and those who use the volume for historical purposes are recommended in matters of doubt to refer to Ducange, Spelman, Cowell, and other authorities. The noticeable Latin words have been included in the Index, which has been made as helpful as possible. The Council of the Chetham Society regret to present to the members a book of so much value and interest in a somewhat unsatisfactory form; but the only alternative, that of further delay, would have involved the postponement of the general index and the completion of the first series of the publications.

NOTES AND CORRECTIONS.

pp. 5, 120. Alveden (Holden), Musden and Ugden, formed part of the Park of Musbirry. See posted, pp. 101, 177; a note below; and Whalley, vol. i. p. 316. Couoppe is now Coupe.

pp. 5–7; 120–1, &c. Hucetum, or houcetum. From the French. It here seems to mean bedding made of dry leaves.

pp. 7, 121. Ramsgreave. An indenture of agreement between Henry, Duke of Lancaster, and the Abbot of Whalley, 1361, refers to certain tenements called Rommesgreve in the Duke's Chase near Blackburn. (35*th Rept.*, p. 38; 32*nd Rept.*, p. 343.)

pp. 7, 121. Collars. These were greyhounds' or harriers' collars, payable at the feast of St. Oswald. (See the Inquis., p. 6, and Whalley, vol. ii. p. 115.)

pp. 7, 121, &c. Letherwyte or Lairwite was the mulct levied by lords of manors for breaches of the seventh commandment.

pp. 8, 121, &c. Thistletack. This was a payment exacted by the lord for depasturing drove beasts upon his commons; or fines for strayed beasts. "It was a custom within the manor of Halton," says Cowell, "that if in driving beasts over the Common, the Driver permits them to graze or take but a thistle, he shall pay a halfpenny a Beast to the Lord of the Fee." (See Whalley, vol. ii. p. 306.)

The Inquisition of 1311 describes the Hallmote of Ightenhill with this "perquisite" worth yearly 40*s*.

pp. 9, 122, &c. Ward of Lancaster Castle. These payments are connected with the tenure of the Earl's lands in Lancashire. Besides the service of knights' fees, he owed a rent of 105*s*. 8*d*. payable yearly to the Castle guard of Lancaster. (Inquis., p. 4.) A ward-penny is money contributed to watch and ward: Denarii vicecomiti vel aliis castellanis persoluti ob castrorum præsidium vel excubias agendas. (Cowell.)

pp. 10, 122, &c. Sac fee. This old tenure was a part of the Earl's service for his Lancashire lands. (Inquis., p. 4.)

pp. 10, 122. The Earl claimed wreck of the sea in his manor of Penwortham in Leylandshire, in North Meols, and Widnes in Derbyshire (i.e., West Derby).

pp. 10, 123. Richard de Stockport. The heir of Rd. de S., who died 1292, was his daughter Joan, who afterwards married Sir Nich. de Eton. (Watson's Earls of Warren, vol. ii. pp. 233, 244.)

pp. 13, 124. The Castle Ditches. The Earl, according to the Inquis., died seised of Clitheroe Castle, with the moat and ditches.

pp. 14, 125, &c. Instaurator. The bailiff of the vaccary. (Cf. Watson's Halifax, p. 240.)

pp. 14, 125. Peter of Chester. He was the last Rector of Whalley, and held that post from 1235 to 1294. He was also Rector of Slaidburn. His other preferments will be found in Whalley, vol. i. pp. 80–1, where the reference to Sir Peter Leycester in note 1 should be altered to p. 272. The authorities believe that he was "a natural son of Lacy." The Abbot of Whalley mentioned elsewhere was Gregory de Northbury.

pp. 15, 125, &c. The Abbot of Salley Abbey, in the county of York, was Hugh, who ruled 1278–1303. The Lacy family were benefactors to the Abbey. John de Lacy, son of "Hell" Lacy, gave them 70 acres of land in 1223, according to an agreement made with the monks when he was in those parts. (Harland's Salley, pp. 17, 45.)

pp. 15, 126. Bolton fair was at Bolton-le-Moors, a manor of the Earl of Lancaster. St. Giles's fair was the great fair at Pontefract, which began on St. Giles's day and lasted eight days. St. Giles was a favourite saint of the Lacies, and his anniversary was their rent-day.

pp. 16, 126. Buckby. In Northamptonshire, near Daventry. On 2 November, 1280, the Earl, who had a manor-house there, obtained a grant of a market and two fairs. The Yorkshire Compotus enters a large payment for Nony's expenses in carrying money to the Earl up to Buckby.

pp. 18, 127, &c. Hegham (now Higham) is another name for Ightenhill.

p. 18, line 15. Marchancia. This word is translated selling at page 128. It occurs again at p. 114, line 9 from foot, where Mr. Lyons's proof rendered it physic (p. 185). The word which is probably intended, as Mr. Chancellor Christie suggests, is Mareschalcia, derived from the French Maréchal; and ferratura Mareschalcia (p. 114) would thus indicate the work of the farrier both as smith and surgeon. There are two words in Du Cange, Marchagium and Marescalcia, connected with the right of lords to provender; but in the present case the services are purchased.

pp. 19, 128, &c. Horses. The jumenta are not strictly mares, but beasts of labour, pack-horses.—The Runcini are the common draught horses. This word is formed from the rous or roux of the Romance language, and may mean ponies or cart-horses, i.e., horses of inferior quality. The Italian is roncius, a nag. The Spanish form is rosin; whence the name of Don Quixotte's horse. From pages 95, 173; 112, 183, it seems as if these Welsh ponies were introduced by the Earl from his lordship of Denbigh.

pp. 19, 128. Wm. de Stopham often attests the Earl's charters, as in the following (Raines MSS., vol. xiv. p. 53): Henry de Lascy count de linc' and const. cestr. sciat me relax' &c. les frankie hom'es de la suite de n're curte de Cliderhow &c. tesmogneo sires Will' de Bottiler, Rob. Banester, Will' le vavasoure, Johan de hodlestan, Iacob de neville . . . Waterbeck Will' de Stopham, Rob. de Lathum, Wanklin de Arderne, Ada' de hodlestan et Rob. de herford ch'rs. (This Deed penes Dom. Barcroft de Barcroft A° 1659.) This and the other Raines extracts are taken from Harl. MS. 2074, containing several Lacy deeds.

pp. 25, 130, &c. Robbers. The writ of Trailbâton, issued 6 April, 1305, directed Sheriffs to be more active against murderers, incendiaries, and thieves. The judges appointed for Lancashire, Yorkshire, and eight other counties, were Wm. le Vavasour, Adam de Middleton, and three more. (Rot. Parl., p. 218.)

pp. 41–2, 141–2. Standen. (Cf. Whalley, vol. i. p. 101.)

pp. 44, 146, &c. The tenure by a service called breda or le brede, was peculiar to Whitley and Appleton in Cheshire, and Denton in Lancashire. In the Inquisition it is said, p. 23, that "each oxgang of land in Widnes pays yearly at Christmas 3*d.* for a certain service called le Brede; sum 4*s.*" pp. 43–8, 142–5. Halton. In this account are enumerated all the places belonging to the manor of Halton. Some of the names are miscopied. — Runcouver Upper and Lower is now called Runcorn Superior and Inferior.—The fishery of Budworth, p. 143, was in the adjoining lake.—Anderbuske is meant for Comberbach.— Cronleycroft or Cornleycroft we do not identify.— Northcotes is Norcot in Over Whitley.— Penre is Little Peover. So pages 148, 155.— Aldredley is Over Alderley.— Lysenker (perhaps written Lysseker) is Liscard, misprinted by Sir Peter Leycester, Listard.—Byrcheles is Birtles.—Hulle and Walmefeld, in Northwich Hundred, called by Sir Peter Leycester "Hulme at Walfield," is now Hulme Walfield. — Coten is Cotton. — Endesbyre and Pexhill is now Henbury-cum-Pexhull.— The Moor should be More, in Bucklow Hundred.—Fellewell should be Thelwall. The other three parts of the fishery at Thelwall belonged to Shrewsbury Abbey.—Langdendale, as pointed out elsewhere, is Mottram-in-Longdendale.— Northwode was a park belonging to the manor (Orm., vol. iii. p. 36, note b).—Netton and Fettone, pp. 48–9, 145, should perhaps be Stretton.—Bekewycke should be Kekwycke. Some of these corrections apply to the next Compotus for the same fee, pp. 57–61; 150–2.

In going over these valuable records of the Halton rents, fines, &c., the reader should have before him the old schedule (dated 1359) of Hugo de Preston, Bayliff of the Serjeanty of Halton, recorded in Sir Peter Leycester, p. 284, and in Ormerod, vol. i. pp. 704–5. The only Cheshire places named in the Earl's Inquisition in the Calendar are Rontere (Runcorn), Whiteleye, Morre, Congleton and Thellewalle.

pp. 50, 146. Denton Mill. Cf. pp. 62, 152. This is Denton near Manchester. Hist. Denton., pp. 2-3. The Earl had here a grant of free warren.

pp. 50, 146. Chevage was the money paid by villeins to their lords in acknowledgement of their villenage; or the money yearly given for the advancement of a lord as a leader or chieftain.

pp. 53, 147. Aston. This is Aston Grange. (Cf. Sir Pet. Ley., p. 214.)

pp. 53, 148. The Knife, which was out of Millington, was, in Sir Peter Leycester's time, a Manchester knife with a horn haft, p. 284. Aydrop Mylingtone, or Endropa de Millington at pp. 65, 155, is called by Sir Peter, Aytrop de Millington, p. 315.

pp. 54, 148. Apples. The Earl of Lincoln cultivated Apples in his garden at Holborn; and they are mentioned in Bp. de Swinfield's household expenses.

pp. 62, 152, lines 9-10 from foot, Hul super Daneno. Perhaps Hulme Walfield.

p. 62, line 11 from foot, for repe silure, read, p. 153, reap silver, the money paid for exemption from the customary duty of reaping for the lord.

pp. 91–3, 170–3. Standen. (Cf. Whalley, vo. i. p. 101.)

pp. 91, 170, &c. Hugh de Clitheroe was settled at Salesbury, and held land there and Little Penhulton in thanage. (See Whalley, vol. ii. pp. 372–5 and ped.) The following deed (Raines MSS., vol. xiv. p. 55) relates to him: O'ib's, &c. Alesia de Lacy salt. in dom. sempt. Sciatis me dedisse &c. Hugo' fil. Hugo' de Cliderhow pro homag' et servic' suo totam illam terram cu' prato et cu' messuag' quæ Robert' del Croslit q'da' de me tenuit in Newton [in Bowland] simul cu' uno acr' et dimid' quæ Will' de Bosco ten' in fœdo hab' libere pacificè &c. Ri'ci de Knole Egid. le Fforestar, &c.

pp. 95, 173. Cridling Stubbs, near Pontefract, was one of the Earl's manors, and some horses had come thence to Ightenhill Park. (Cf. the Yorkshire Compotus.)

pp. 101, 177. The Park newly made was Musbirry. (Cf. pp. 115, 185.) The following charter (Raines MSS., vol. xiv. p. 54) relates to it: Henr. de Lasy Comes Lincoln, &c., dedi co'cessi, &c., Adæ fil Adæ de Holden quadam p'te vasti n'ri in Todington in' apet ad paliu' parci de Mosebury, &c., redd. nobis et hered's n'ris vs. arg' ad festum S'ci Egidii, &c. Dat. xx Junii A° 2 Edwardi fil. R. Edwardi, 1307.

pp. 110, 182. Robert de Holden is referred to in the following charters: —

Sciant o'es p'sens &c. Hen' de Lacy concess. Adæ fil. Rob. de Holden tot. illam ter' cu' p'tin's quæ Will. fil. Keelyn ac Will. fil. ejus quond' tenuer' in haslingden et quæ nunc accedit p' felonia d'ci Will.' p' qua suspensus fuit &c. Dat. p. 112, line 3. Carratum. Bailey defines a charre of lead as a quantity containing 30 pigs, weighing 6 stone wanting 2 lbs., and every stone weighing 12 lbs. The charrus, carecta, or plaustrata of lead, says Prof. Rogers, "contained 30 fontinelli, fotmael, pedes or pigs. Each pes contained 5 petræ of 14 lbs. each, and therefore the pes was 70 lbs. avoirdupois, and the charrus 2,100 lbs. Now, measured by the old hundred, i.e., 108 lbs., the charrus contains nearly 19½ hundreds, i.e., it corresponds to the fodder, or fother, of modern times." (Cf. pp. 116, 186; and Whalley, vol. ii. p. 98.)

pp. 115, 185. Altofts was one of the Earl's manors near Wakefield, co. York.

pp. 115, 185. This Bradford was in the county of York, one of the Earl's manors, and part of the dower of Alice, mother of the Earl. It lay in the route of the Earl and his retainers between Clitheroe and Pontefract. The Inquisition refers to the Hall or Manor House, the water mill, and the fulling mill. A charter of John of Gaunt mentions services to be done to him and his heirs "coming to Bradford from Blackburnshire."
